The American Press and the Cold War
The Rise of Authoritarianism in South Korea, 1945–1954
O. Elliott

- Features the first scholarly study of American press coverage of South Korea in the 1940s and 1950s
- Examines the political, military, institutional, cultural, ideological, and personal factors that influenced American journalists covering South Korea
- Documents the largely forgotten stories of the foreign correspondents who sought to warn the United States about the rise of authoritarianism in South Korea as well as the efforts of the South Korean government to influence American public opinion

During the Cold War, the United States enabled the rise of President Syngman Rhee’s repressive government in South Korea, and yet neither the American occupation nor Rhee’s growing authoritarianism ever became particularly controversial news […]

Imperial Ladies of the Ottonian Dynasty

Women and Rule in Tenth-Century Germany

P. G. Jestice

- Examines elite Ottonian women, particularly Theophanu and Adelheid, in the context of attitudes toward women in Germany of the central Middle Ages
- Presents arguments against the concept of exceptionalism—the idea that Ottonian royal women were treated and had powers very different from those of non-royal women
- Appeals to students and scholars of medieval history, German history, queenship and monarchy studies, and gender studies

In tenth-century Europe and particularly in Germany, imperial women were able to wield power in ways that were scarcely imaginable in earlier centuries. Theophanu and Adelheid were two of the most […]

Zimbabwean Communities in Britain
Imperial and Post-Colonial Identities and Legacies
C. R. Zembe

- Using Zimbabwean communities in Britain as a case study, this book explores how imperial and post-colonial history has shaped and continues to shape African immigrant communities
- Analyses why attempts to create a unified diaspora identity by some African immigrant communities proved to be an emotive process which could not conceal historic ethnic or racial tensions and prejudices
- Highlights the increasing diversity of African immigrants in Britain, focusing on the dynamics and differences even within the relatively small Zimbabwean community

This book examines why Zimbabwean immigrants in Britain should be viewed as a product of ethno-racial identities and [...]
Sensory Perceptions in Language, Embodiment and Epistemology
A. Baicchi, R. Digonnet, J. L. Sandford (Eds)

- Discusses novel philosophical and linguistic perspectives on sensory perception
- Explores the role of verbal expressions, metaphors and synaesthesia in stimuli perception
- Describes possible discrepancy between sensory experience and its verbal description

The book illustrates how the human ability to adapt to the environment and interact with it can explain our linguistic representation of the world as constrained by our bodies and sensory perception. The different chapters discuss philosophical, [...]

The Politics of Dependence
Economic Parasites and Vulnerable Lives
P. J. L. Cockburn

- Takes the topic of dependence as a starting point for examining the problems of economic justice generated by foundational social and economic institutions
- Offers a fresh, original take on issues of economic justice and dependence, going against the grain of most political theorising about economic justice today
- Integrates a wide range of scholarship including feminist political theory, economic sociology, economic anthropology, political philosophy, and legal theory

The central claim of this book is that the dichotomy between economic dependence and economic independence is completely inadequate for describing the political challenges faced by contemporary capitalist welfare states.

W. F. Kalf

- Argues for a new version of moral error theory
- Reformulates the moral error theory in metaethics in terms of pragmatic presuppositions rather than conceptual entailments
- Offers a new substitutivist response to the ‘then what?’ question of what should happen after we come to recognise that the moral error theory is true

This book provides a novel formulation and defence of moral error theory. It also provides a novel solution to the so-called now what question; viz., the question what we should do with our moral thought and talk after moral error theory. [...]

Newton’s Sensorium: Anatomy of a Concept
J. C. Kassler

- Affords insights into the underlying model behind Newton’s sensorium concept
- Furthers understanding of both Isaac Newton and key developments in seventeenth century science
- Calls certain assumptions into question, enabling a fresh perspective on Newton and his works

These chapters analyze texts from Isaac Newton’s work to shed new light on scientific understanding at his time. Newton used the concept of “sensorium” in writings intended for a public audience, in relation to both humans and God, but even today [...]

Total Collapse: The Case Against Responsibility and Morality
S. Kershnar

- The first book to deny that people are morally responsible and that morality exists and to connect these two claims
- Relates moral responsibility to foundationalism, internalism, and rights
- Tightly organized, concise, and accessible

This book argues that there is no morality and that people are not morally responsible for what they do. In particular, it argues that what people do is neither right nor wrong and that they are neither praiseworthy nor blameworthy for doing it. [...]

Moral Expertise
New Essays from Theoretical and Clinical Bioethics
J. C. Watson, L. K. Guidry-Grimes (Eds)
- Contains all new essays that engage with a growing body of scholarly literature on moral expertise
- The first anthology on moral expertise since Lisa Rasmussen’s excellent 2005 collection, Ethics Expertise
- Brings together both academics and clinical ethicists on the contentious question of moral expertise

This collection addresses whether ethicists, like authorities in other fields, can speak as experts in their subject matter. Though ethics consultation is a growing practice in medical contexts, there remain difficult questions about the role of [...]
Universal Biology after Aristotle, Kant, and Hegel
The Philosopher’s Guide to Life in the Universe
R. D. Winfield

- Provides an outline of a universal biology that transcends the contingencies of life on earth
- Builds on the seminal achievements of Aristotle, Kant and Hegel
- Shows the fundamental forms that life can take wherever in the universe living things may arise

Here is a universal biology that draws upon the contributions of Aristotle, Kant, and Hegel to unravel the mystery of life and conceive what is essential to living things anywhere they may arise. [...]"}

Practical Intellect and Substantial Deliberation
In Seeking an Expressive Notion of Rationality
C. Yuan

- Explores the fundamental philosophical questions on the self-world rational relationship without conforming to academic stereotypes
- Presents a significant diagnosis of various forms of intellectualism (philosophical, epistemic, moral, etc.), which critically evaluates today’s pervasively reflective-intellectual culture
- Makes any detached notion of rationality and formalized understanding of human intellect highly problematic, which can potentially inspire to the current debate over artificial intelligence

This book presents an anti-intellectualist view of how the cognitive-mental dimension of human intellect is rooted in and interwoven with our embodied-internal components including emotion, perception, desire, etc., by investigating practical [...]"}

Philosophy of Race
An Introduction
N. Zack

- Constructs an overview for students thinking, talking, and writing about philosophy of race
- Takes a "birds eye view" of the subfield of philosophy of race, and strives to balance opposing perspectives
- Written in a clear, accessible style

Philosophy of Race: An Introduction provides plainly written access to a new subfield that has been in the background of philosophy since Plato and Aristotle. Part I provides an overview of ideas of race and ethnicity in the philosophical canon, [...]"}
