Infectious Agents and Cancer Newsletter

February 2019

Welcome to the first infectious Agents and Cancer newsletter of this year – I hope 2019 is off to a great start for you all.

2019 was a very successful year for Infectious Agents and Cancer in which the journal obtained an Impact Factor of 2.123. In this newsletter, we would like to share with you some articles from the current and future developments for Infectious Agents and Cancer.

Top 3 cited articles of 2018

1. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.
2. HIV infection and P16 expression in oral and oropharyngeal cancer in Kazakhstan by D. Ievleva et al.
3. Could Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis cause Crohn’s disease, autoimmune arthritis...and colorectal cancer? by E.S. Pierce

Top 3 Altmetric scores for articles of 2018

1. Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.
2. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Infectious Agents and Cancer Newsletter

February 2019

Welcome to the first infectious Agents and Cancer newsletter of this year – I hope 2019 is off to a great start for you all.

2019 was a very successful year for Infectious Agents and Cancer in which the journal obtained an Impact Factor of 2.123. In this newsletter, we would like to share with you some articles from the current and future developments for Infectious Agents and Cancer.

Top 3 cited articles of 2018

1. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.
2. HIV infection and P16 expression in oral and oropharyngeal cancer in Kazakhstan by D. Ievleva et al.
3. Could Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis cause Crohn’s disease, autoimmune arthritis...and colorectal cancer? by E.S. Pierce

Top 3 Altmetric scores for articles of 2018

1. Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.
2. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Infectious Agents and Cancer Newsletter

February 2019

Welcome to the first infectious Agents and Cancer newsletter of this year – I hope 2019 is off to a great start for you all.

2019 was a very successful year for Infectious Agents and Cancer in which the journal obtained an Impact Factor of 2.123. In this newsletter, we would like to share with you some articles from the current and future developments for Infectious Agents and Cancer.

Top 3 cited articles of 2018

1. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.
2. HIV infection and P16 expression in oral and oropharyngeal cancer in Kazakhstan by D. Ievleva et al.
3. Could Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis cause Crohn’s disease, autoimmune arthritis...and colorectal cancer? by E.S. Pierce

Top 3 Altmetric scores for articles of 2018

1. Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.
2. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Infectious Agents and Cancer Newsletter

February 2019

Welcome to the first infectious Agents and Cancer newsletter of this year – I hope 2019 is off to a great start for you all.

2019 was a very successful year for Infectious Agents and Cancer in which the journal obtained an Impact Factor of 2.123. In this newsletter, we would like to share with you some articles from the current and future developments for Infectious Agents and Cancer.

Top 3 cited articles of 2018

1. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.
2. HIV infection and P16 expression in oral and oropharyngeal cancer in Kazakhstan by D. Ievleva et al.
3. Could Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis cause Crohn’s disease, autoimmune arthritis...and colorectal cancer? by E.S. Pierce

Top 3 Altmetric scores for articles of 2018

1. Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.
2. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.

Thematic Series

Infectious Agents and Cancer is currently participating in the Precocious Oncology cross-journal thematic series. This series is running across a number of BMC journals within the oncology portfolio to help bring together the latest research on precision oncology.

Why not submit your latest research on precision oncology.

Infectious Agents and Cancer Newsletter

February 2019

Welcome to the first infectious Agents and Cancer newsletter of this year – I hope 2019 is off to a great start for you all.

2019 was a very successful year for Infectious Agents and Cancer in which the journal obtained an Impact Factor of 2.123. In this newsletter, we would like to share with you some articles from the current and future developments for Infectious Agents and Cancer.

Top 3 cited articles of 2018

1. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.
2. HIV infection and P16 expression in oral and oropharyngeal cancer in Kazakhstan by D. Ievleva et al.
3. Could Mycobacterium avium subspecies paratuberculosis cause Crohn’s disease, autoimmune arthritis...and colorectal cancer? by E.S. Pierce

Top 3 Altmetric scores for articles of 2018

1. Epidemiologic and economic burden of HIV disease in Spain: re-interpretation of additional 3 types from the I.S.S. vaccine by N. Lopez et al.
2. Dissecting the mechanisms and molecules underlying the potential carcinogenicity of red and processed meat in colorectal cancer (CRC): an overview on the current state of knowledge by M. Cascella et al.