After publication:
A guide for Journal of Organization Design authors

The Journal of Organization Design is a purely Gold Open Access journal, which means that upon publication articles are instantly and permanently available in full to anyone with an internet connection. Once published, your Journal of Organization Design article can be read, cited, and shared freely.

We hope you will take advantage of the following opportunities to amplify the impact of your work.

Publish a video

To complement your published article, consider creating a video for publication on jorgdesign.springeropen.com.

Videos can take a numerous forms, including but not limited to:

- a video abstract, wherein one or more authors introduces the work
- a debate or discussion about the subject of your paper
- a “behind the paper” video, including footage of your research subject
- a video focusing on recommendations for practice

This is your chance to speak directly to readers! Whichever format you choose, aim to provide information beyond the paper’s content. For instance, did your original thesis change over the course of research and writing? Did anything surprise you? Which challenges did you encounter? And how does your paper open up opportunities for future research?

For best results, choose favorable lighting and a simple background; keep text minimal (for instance, consider listing only your name and institution, rather than the journal name and article name); avoid mentioning the date of publication in your video, to prevent it from ‘going out of date’; and submit your video as soon as possible for optimal impact.
Additionally, as the journal is read by a broad audience, make sure your video content is accessible to practitioners like executive and managers as well as academic researchers.

Technical specifications:
- Your video should be between 30 second and 5 minutes long.
- Its resolution should be 16:9 or 4:3, with a maximum file size of 2GB.
- Supported file formats include avi, wmv, mp4, mov, m2p, mp2, mpg, mpeg, flv, mxf, mts, m4v, and 3gp.

Send your video to Erica.Gordon-Mallin@Springer.com, noting your article title and manuscript ID. If the file is too large for email, please use www.wetransfer.com.

Share, track, and engage

We encourage you to share your article on social media platforms; to write a blog post about it; and to share it with your networks.

Increasingly, as a complement to traditional indexing measures, researchers are looking to “alternative” metrics which measure article usage. Journal of Organization Design articles are tracked by Altmetric (for more information, see www.altmetric.com). In order to ensure all mentions of your article are tracked by Altmetric (and therefore count toward your article’s impact score), always include your article’s full URL, or a shortened version of it (e.g. via bitly.com).

To track conversations around your publication, click on the colored bar beneath “Altmetric Attention Score” on your published article’s page.

On the next screen, you will find a breakdown of your article’s attention on social media, in the press, on sites like Wikipedia, and more. We hope you will participate in the conversation!
The Journal of Organization Design depends on high-quality reviews to maintain high standards and to publish papers that make a contribution to the field of organization design. We invite you to register as a reviewer for the journal. If you have any questions about this process, please contact the journal’s editors.

We also invite you to sign up for article alerts via the home page, and to check back regularly for journal news.

Copyright

As a Journal of Organization Design author, you own the copyright to your article. The Creative Commons Attribution License 4.0 formalizes this and others publication terms; for more information, see www.springeropen.com/get-published/copyright.

You may grant any third party the right to use the article freely as long as its integrity is maintained and credit is given. Practically, this means that you may freely reproduce and disseminate your work (for instance, in the classroom). If you have any questions about this, please contact Erica.Gordon-Mallin@springer.com.

Organizational Design Community

The Journal of Organization Design is an official publication of the Organizational Design Community (ODC), an international community of scholars, executives, and organizations dedicated to advancing the theory and practice of organization design. The ODC is the preeminent community in which research, practice, and learning intersect to produce valuable design knowledge and applications. Currently, all articles accepted to the Journal of Organization Design are published without any cost to the author thanks to sponsorship from the ODC with support from Aarhus University, Duke University, and INSEAD-Singapore.

If you would like to continue the conversation with like-minded scholars and practitioners, we encourage you to join the ODC. For more information, see www.orgdesigncomm.com/join-us.

Thank you for choosing the Journal of Organization Design as an outlet for your work. We look forward to your continued engagement with the journal.